Canada said no to Haiti: UN

► Feds announced more than $90 million in projects yesterday, following reports that Canada had declined a request to continue military relief effort in Haiti

► Federal Minister for International Cooperation Bev Oda plays with Haitian orphans at a community centre in Montreal yesterday. Oda announced that Canada will provide funding to improve health, education and agriculture in Haiti.

The Canadian government turned down a plea to extend its military relief effort in Haiti after last year's earthquake, says a top United Nations official in Port-au-Prince.

Canada was widely praised for rushing to provide emergency help, including clean water, security and medical care, following the devastating temblor last Jan. 12.

But despite attempts by the UN and local authorities to persuade Ottawa to keep the engineers in Haiti beyond the end of Canada's relief mandate, the military packed up and left.

"I think there was a strong request that they stay on," Nigel Fisher, the UN's head of humanitarian aid in Haiti, said from Port-au-Prince.

"Many felt that they wished they had stayed because they were extremely effective."

Canada's original mandate was to provide a rapid, short-term response, and the UN says there was no obligation to extend the mission. Still, Fisher said, it would have been better if Canada had stuck around longer than a couple of months.

Panels may grab sun and cash

The roofs of 20 municipal buildings could be generating renewable energy — and cash — if a plan to mount solar panels on them goes ahead.

Panels have already been installed atop City Hall and the Transit Control Centre on Belfast Road, in a pilot project with Hydro Ottawa to sell solar energy at premium rates set by the provincial government.

The environment committee discusses the plan next week. ● STEVE COLLINS

Club owner recovering from stroke

Eugene Haslam, the owner of iconic Ottawa music and dance club Zaphod Beeblebrox, has been released from hospital after suffering a stroke Dec. 14, 2010. A statement issued yesterday said Haslam is recovering at home and has appointed long time associate Dave Ward as his successor. Ward will take over as entertainment and marketing director of the club. ● METRO

As a cultural ambassador for Canada, local poet Oni "the Haitian sensation" Joseph struggles hearing news about her cousins in western Haiti who are still living in constant fear.

"There are no resources for them and access to clean water is a big issue," said Joseph.

Today marks the one year anniversary of the devastating earthquake that rocked the Caribbean nation and displaced more than 1.5 million people.

"The food that used to be grown in Haiti has to be imported and people haven't been able to get back on their feet."

Although she appreciates the generosity of ordinary Canadians who have made donations, she said she questions where the money flowing from Canada to Haiti is going.

"Where is the money going and why are people still suffering?"

Stephen Beaudet, professor and director of the School of International Development at the University of Ottawa, also questions the government's aid budget for Haiti.

"After one year, it's unacceptable," he said.

"They should have had a more vigorous, high-gear program."

Ongoing support

► Minister of International Cooperation Bev Oda announced yesterday support for eight new initiatives in Haiti totaling $93.1 million.

► With support of the Canadian International Development Agency, the new initiatives are aimed at improving life in key areas such as health, agriculture and education.

Program aims to provide free dental care

A new provincial program will provide $2 million worth of free dental care to Ottawa children from low-income families.

At the Ottawa launch of the Healthy Smiles Program in the Le Patro Community Centre, Community and Social Services Minister Madeleine Meilleur, a former nurse, emphasized the importance of dental visits for everyone.

10K

10,000 Ottawa children could qualify for free dental care through the Healthy Smiles Program. Provincially, an estimated 130,000 kids could benefit.

"Good oral health is a key component to good overall health," she said. "So making sure Ottawa's kids have access to quality preventative dental care means we are setting them up to be healthy adults. It means they'll have a better quality of life," Meilleur added.

Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson said the program, to be administered locally by Ottawa Public Health, is a good example of different levels of governments working together.

"Pro-active and good dental hygiene ensures that fewer children need access to emergency rooms and hospitals," he said.

Two groups unite to keep Ottawa warm

Ottawa's Snowsuit Fund along with a group of Ismaili volunteers will work together later this month to make sure kids and adults in the Ottawa-Gatineau region stay warm during the winter. On Jan. 23, the local chapter of Challenging Ismaili Volunteers in Communities (CIVIC), will be on George Street in the Byward Market collecting donated coats and snowsuits for the Snowsuit Fund.

"We (CIVIC) selected the spot because it's a really central area," said event organizer, Roshena Moledina.

A recent transplant from British Columbia, Moledina said one of her friends from Vancouver organizes a coat drive every year, which inspired her to do the same here in the Ottawa/Gatineau area.

"I just thought it would be something nice to do here as well," she said adding her friends warned her when she moved to Ottawa that winters are much harsher than she is used to.

Moledina said her group will also be accepting winter accessories such as mittens, scarves and hats.

Snowsuit Fundraising Coordinator Margaret Armour said the coat drive means a lot to her charity.

"We are not government funded so we rely on individuals and Ottawa businesses. Anytime someone takes the initiative to help us out, it really means a lot," Armour said.

Foul play ruled out in baby's death

After conducting an initial investigation, Gatineau police have ruled out foul play in the death of a 15-month-old girl who was rushed to hospital from her home daycare on Monday.

Police spokesperson, Const. Giselle Poirier said the investigation into the circumstances of the child's death continues, and no information will be released until an autopsy is conducted today at St-Justine Hospital in

"Our investigation is to find out if there is something criminal or not."

CONST. GISELLE POIRIER

Montréal.

She added the baby turned a year old in late September.

Police will not release the girls' name, however, they did say that her family is not from Gatineau.

Police were called to a private daycare at 34 rue du Tartan in Aylmer just before noon on Monday morning after they received a call about an unconscious baby.

The child was transported to Hull Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

No charges have been laid, but Poirier says the autopsy results will help police decide if they need to revisit that.

Haiti still struggling one year after quake

Government and international community criticized for inaction

The man's body lay face down, his white shirt shining like wax in the sun as he was unearthed in the ruins of a Port-au-Prince restaurant a year after the earthquake.

The bodies still being found in the rubble are a sign of how far Haiti has to go to recover from a disaster that left the capital in ruins and is estimated to have killed more than 230,000 people.

As the dust was still settling from the Jan. 12, 2010 disaster, volunteers and hundreds of aid groups flocked in with food, water and first aid that saved countless lives. But the effort to rebuild has been dwarfed by the size of the tragedy and, perhaps most fatally, the lack of Haitian and international leadership and co-ordination of more than 10,000 non-governmental organizations.

President Rene Preval did not speak publicly for days after the quake. He has been seen by most Haitians as ineffective at best, and many observers have criticized him for not spearheading reconstruction or making the hard policy decisions needed to rebuild.

Advocacy groups also blame much of the Haitian government's weakness on an international community that is not keeping its pledge of support.

Housing bubble concerns seem out the window

► December's seasonally adjusted annual rate of urban starts fell 13.3 per cent to 149,100 units

Canada's housing market appears to be heading for a soft landing in 2011, with the pace of home-construction slowing last month — easing concern that a glut of new properties will come on the market and undercut real-estate prices.

Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. reported Tuesday that home starts fell to an annualized 171,500 last month, well down from November's annualized rate of 198,200 units.

Most of the decline was attributed to fewer multi-family dwelling units — condos and apartment buildings — although single-family housing starts also fell.

Recent data suggest that starts are on a downward track toward the 170,000 number that many believe is the sustainable level of new homes in Canada, down from an estimated 192,500 units in 2010.

During the last three months of 2010, housing starts averaged on an annualized pace of 181,600, with December the weakest month.

December's drop-off in housing starts was mostly due to a plunge in the multiple starts segment, especially in Ontario, the CMHC said.

MySpace cuts jobs

Struggling entertainment site MySpace said Tuesday that it is cutting nearly half of its staff worldwide, or about 500 people, after an extensive revamp in October overhauled its look and allowed it to be run with fewer people.

MySpace declined to say how much the cuts would save. A previous round of cuts in June 2009 eliminated 30 per cent of its work force, or about 420 jobs.

News Corp. bought the site in 2005 for $580 million U.S., but it has been losing money consistently.

In the three months through Sept. 30, the "other" segment housing MySpace lost $156 million.

News Corp. executives had put MySpace on a short leash to get profitable. MySpace said that since its overhaul, it is "trending positively" with an uptick in new and returning users, although it did not immediately clarify how many. Late last year, it had around 120 million global users, compared with more than half a billion for Facebook.

Industry revs up for auto show

Thousands from the global automotive industry are gathered in Detroit this week for 30 to 40 worldwide vehicle debuts, as well as exchanging ideas and strategies that affect global economics. The show, which opens to the public Jan. 15, has long echoed the mood of the industry.

SAY WHAT YOU'RE THINKING: EWWW

Just sayin'

PAUL SULLIVAN

I'm sorry. The only way I can look at 84-year-old Hugh Hefner's recent engagement to 24-year-old Crystal Harris is as a dad.

If I was Crystal's dad and she came home with an 84-year-old beau, I'd have the old geezer arrested for child abuse. Or at least blond abuse.

What is she thinking? The Playboy of the Western World is way past his best before date. Never mind what he's thinking. In fact, I don't want to know what he's thinking.

She's probably thinking: "This won't take long."

Even if it lasts a week and he expires with a smile on his face, is there any dad alive who wants his pride and joy to marry the world's oldest boy?

But the one who is really upset is Holly Madison, the former Hooters girl and Hef's ex-No. 1.

He broke up with her because he didn't want to get married. As if?! Now he's marrying this Crystal. Stay tuned for Holly's tell-all, coming up on her reality show, Holly's World, Jan. 29.

I'm not making this up.

Hefner has been exploiting women for more than 60 years, and I guess it's hard to teach an old dog new tricks. Obviously, he is determined to die with his boots on. Or, you could argue, it's a clever strategy. Back in the day, Hef kept a harem of seven or eight Playboy bunnies at the mansion. Now he's pledging to be faithful to Crystal alone, which is probably a great relief when you're 84, even with Viagra.

Of course, the perpetual party is mainly a myth. Hefner stays home and watches movies or plays cards with his aged cronies. He likes old movies.

Crystal's favourite movie is The Little Mermaid. She was three when it was released, and it has stayed with her ever since.

I guess you could see the Playboy Mansion as a sheltered workshop for silicon stuffed airheads who couldn't keep your order straight at McDonald's. Who else would think it's a good idea to marry an octogenarian who listens to Bix Beiderbecke on his Victrola?

But silicon-stuffed airheads are people, too, and deserve to be protected from the depredations of rabbit zombies. I have half a mind to get out the pitchforks and the torches, storm the mansion and rescue Crystal from the clutches of Hef the Impaler. (That's if his Viagra prescription has been renewed).

Then I'll send her home to bed without her supper. Or Hef, for that matter.

HOLLYWOOD'S CAUTIONARY TALE

In Focus

RICHARD CROUSE

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

The Dilemma takes a funny look at infidelity when Vince Vaughn finds his friend's wife has been cheating

Sometimes it seems like Hollywood is obsessed with infidelity, both on screen and off. Celebrity cheating scandals — Jesse and the porn star, Tiger and, well, er... everyone — covered the front pages recently and Zsa Zsa Gabor once famously said, "How many husbands have I had? You mean apart from my own?"

Even supposedly happily-ever-after Tinseltown couples preemptively guard against unfaithfulness by signing "cheat-proof" prenups.

Catherine Zeta-Jones has a legal infidelity clause with Michael Douglas and it's rumoured that Denise Richards and Charlie Sheen signed one worth more than four million dollars.

In this weekend's The Dilemma, a funny take on infidelity, Vince Vaughn discovers his best friend's wife is having an affair.

There have been adultery comedies before, but usually on screen in American films there is a price to be paid for matrimonial betrayal.

Ever since the first cheating Hollywood movie, 1915's Infidelity, movies like The End of the Affair, Body Heat and De-railed have shown the consequences of bed hopping, but one movie stands head and shoulder above the rest as a cautionary tale.

Fatal Attraction begins with Michael Douglas, a married man, who has a fling with Glenn "I'm not gonna be ignored" Close.

When he tries to break off their affair, she becomes a lesson in why not to cheat on your wife.

The film was a sensation in 1987 and its most famous clip, the rabbit boiling on the stove scene, even inspired a phrase in the Urban Dictionary.

According to their website, cook your rabbit "refers to the moment when someone goes over the edge in their obsession with another person."

Fatal Attraction was a box office bonanza, inspiring a number of imitators including The Crush, Single White Female and a spoof called Fatal Instinct.

More poignant is Same Time Next Year, the story of a 26-year long affair.

Alan Alda and Ellen Burstyn star as an extramarital couple who rendezvous once a year from youth to old age.

Based on a stage play by Canadian Bernard Slade, it's a nice mix of humour — when asked how many kids he has Alda lies, saying two rather than three, saying, "I thought it would make me seem less married," — and emotion.

Perhaps the strangest infidelity movie on our list is Come with Me My Love, a supernatural tale about a man who kills his cheating wife, then commits suicide, only to come back as a ghost 50 years later to haunt his old apartment.

New album

Canadian pop star Avril Lavigne has released the lead single off her forthcoming album, Goodbye Lullaby. The first single, What the Hell, was made available digitally yesterday in the lead up to the release of her fourth album, due Mar. 8. In a blog post late last year, Lavigne expressed frustration with her label and the delayed release of the new album.

Republic of Doyle returning tonight

ANNE BRODIE

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Stolen chip trucks, gangs, prodigal sons, murder and mayhem come to roost this year in Allan Hawco's hit series Republic of Doyle.

Newfoundlander Jake Doyle's unconventional approach to crime fighting, his unique partnership with his father Malachy and Hawco's charm have won the show five Gemini nominations, an international viewership and interest from the likes of Paul Gross, Martha Burns, Gordon Pinsent, Lindy Booth, Don McKellar, Nic Campbell and Victor Garber, who will drop by to complicate things.

Hawco's Doyle is an odd TV private eye. "He won't carry a gun. We're not dealing with a hero who shoots people. There are corpses and high stakes but it is important that Jake isn't the initiator of violence. It doesn't suit him; he was never interested in that kind of behaviour."

Professionally, Doyle's a "dog with a bone. He's obsessive. If he feels injustice is happening to somebody he has to make it right and hold people accountable."

But personally, he's less clear. "Jake has a lot of complications this year. Malachy has a heart attack. It's the reality of what happens. We'll see Malachy again but I can't explain, I'm not saying he comes out all right."

And there's a change of address from the Doyle home to a downtown loft. Could this signal a sudden Doyle hipsterism? "No, my Lord! It's in the building over the bar. He's crashing on the couch there because his girlfriend threw him out of the house. It's as far away as hipster as you can get."

The show airs Wednesday at 9 p.m. on CBC.

► Got the winter blahs? If so, it's hard not to feel perked up when you are hanging out with Bonhomme, Quebec City's most popular resident, at the Quebec Winter Carnival

► Bonhomme is the mascot of the annual Quebec Winter Carnival, which runs from Jan. 28 to Feb. 13.

Winter fun with Bonhomme

THE TRAVELLIN' CANADIAN

DARREN PARKMAN
TRAVEL@METRONEWS.CA

In the midst of all these post-holiday grey days, who wouldn't need a little pick me up in the form of sub zero merry-making?

Old Quebec City is just the remedy for those winter blahs. The historic city offers one of the oldest, (and truly coldest) winter festivals around.

When I was a young lad, I was actually afraid of that giant smiling snowman with the red toque towering above us mere mortals.

Turns out, the Bonhomme Carnaval is just as friendly as Frosty the snowman, and that is why he remains the lovable mascot of the largest winter carnival in the world. Talk about Canadian history.

After checking into the beautiful and historic Chateau Frontenac hotel on the banks of the St. Lawrence, I was amazed at all the snowy festivities taking place all over old Quebec.

Elaborate evening parades, sleigh and dog sled rides, concerts, and snow sculpting to name just a few.

The very funny and icy canoe race on the St. Lawrence River is not to be missed. And if you're really adventurous you can zip-line right through the middle of the historic Plains of Abraham, which happens to be the nucleus of the carnival. It's also a fun tradition to actually skate alongside the Bonhomme himself, so better sharpen those blades. That chilly dude can hustle!

All this wintery fun has been part of the Quebec winter calendar since 1894, and began with the habitants of New France, who knew how to eat, drink, be merry, and get a little rowdy prior to lent.

Let's face it, this time of year there's no sense in fighting the cold ... might as well celebrate it. What better place to do that than in cool old Quebec?

This year's Quebec Winter Carnival runs from Jan. 28 to Feb. 13.

Plenty of history, heights in Quebec City

If you need a break from the Carnival, here are some other cool things to do in Quebec City.

Shop in Petit Champlain: Check out North America's oldest shopping district, located at the foot of Dufferin Terrace in the Vieux Port. Watch actors re-enact Quebec's 400-year history, or chow down at any one of a dozen bistros.

Visit Canyon St. Anne: Marvel at the highest pedestrian bridge in Quebec, and walk over three separate suspension bridges, past a giant waterfall. For the more adventurous, try first class bungee jumping, zip-lining and mountain biking. DARREN PARKMAN

Hawaii on a budget

While planning a week-long family trip to Hawaii as an escape from winter, I kept getting suggestions from friends, websites and even my kids for all kinds of "must-see" activities.

Helicopter tours! Dolphin encounters! Luau! Bike rides down volcanic mountains!

Then I checked out the prices for all these marvels. Helicopter tour, $200. Dolphin encounter, $100. Luau, $100. Bike ride, $100.

Now multiply each fee by four, for me, my spouse and two kids. I'd just added $2,000 to the budget for our trip.

But if we didn't do any of these things, would we really feel we'd missed out?

I'm happy to report we skipped 'em all with no regrets. Yet our trip to Hawaii was spectacular. We hiked through rain forests, walked across a volcano floor, stargazed from the world's tallest mountain, and swam in a bay so full of colourful sea life that it was like stepping into an aquarium.

The cost for these activities, aside from parking or car entry fees: Zero.

Which is not to say that a vacation to Hawaii can be done on a dime. We pounced on a $550 US round-trip airfare, but even that meant $2,200 US for a family of four.

We stuffed ourselves at free hotel breakfasts and at places like Me's BBQ, 151 Uluniu St. in Waikiki on Oahu, where the plate lunch (a mix of choices including chicken, fish, pork, vegetables, rice and macaroni salad) fills you up for under $10. But most of all, we collected memories from one amazing adventure to the next, without spending a lot of cash. Here are some details.

Kalalau Trail and Hanalei Bay on Kauai

The Kalalau Trail on Kauai's Napali Coast is 18 kilometres one way, but the first section — 6.5 kilometres round trip — makes a perfect half-day outing (kalalautrail.com).

Mauna Kea Volcanoes Park and Kahului Bay on the Big Island

Mauna Kea, the world's tallest mountain (9,144 metres from its base in the ocean to its summit), is home to many of the world's largest observatories. A final Big Island wonder was Kahului Beach Park in Kona. For under $10, you can rent snorkel gear on site and wade into the water to see coral and fish.

Diamond Head, Pearl Harbor, hula show and surfing in Oahu

The famous beach at Waikiki is located in Honolulu on Oahu. Here I found a wonderful free alternative to a luau, which I wanted to attend not so much for the mai tais as for the performances.

No visit to Oahu is complete without visiting its two most famous landmarks: Diamond Head and Pearl Harbor. A steep 2.5-kilometre roundtrip trail to the summit of Diamond Head's volcanic cone offers panoramic views of the ocean and Honolulu.

At Pearl Harbor your visit begins with a film on the site's history. Then take a short boat ride to the USS Arizona Memorial.

Canadian chef aims for kitchen gold

► Ryan Stone will compete in an international competition in France

When Ryan Stone hits the stage at a convention centre in Lyon, France, he'll be entering what can only be described as the Olympics of the culinary world.

"It's life-consuming," Stone says of the preparation involved in representing Canada in the glitzy and popular Bocuse d'Or competition involving 24 countries.

Top food wizards from Argentina to Uruguay will vie for a prestigious trophy and $35,000 euros as they prepare lamb and fish dishes in five and a half hours on Jan. 25 and 26.

A team of 12 chefs will compete each day, with Stone going head to head with his rivals on the second day of the event.

Stone says the atmosphere will be electric as 8,000 spectators watch the chefs' every move in the knock-down, drag-out event that's been held every two years since 1987.

"I compare it to watching a playoff hockey game and a rock concert combined," he says.

"People who are watching are really loud, they've got music pumping through the speakers there and two MCs. It's crazy."

Stone, 28, was selected in 2008 to represent Canada at this year's Bocuse d'Or from among five chefs at a competition in Montreal where he cooked two winning dishes including a black cod and lobster combo rolled together with a scallop mousse made of chives, parsley, tarragon and truffles.

Stone's eight-member team includes a manager who has secured sponsorships, liaised with organizers in Lyon and helped launch fundraisers that will net about $350,000 to compete at the show.

Stone says the two large silver platters that will display his lamb and fish creations cost about $40,000, and the rest of will go toward everything from air fare to all that lamb and fish that he's been cooking up over and over again for months.

Last February, the competitors for this year's Bocuse d'Or received word about which type of meat and fish they'd be cooking — saddle of lamb, which includes both sides of the loin with the backbone still attached, along with monkfish, Scottish brown crab and langoustine, which is similar to baby lobster.

Canadian chefs have never placed in the top three at the Bocuse d'Or contest, but neither have those from the United States, Stone points out.

"The best we've placed is fourth, and the best that the States has placed is fifth. We've pretty well always placed in the Top 10."

This year, the country to watch is Denmark, according to Stone.

Depression cuts co-worker communication

Most Canadians that experience depression in their lifetime will be affected in their working years.

While the impact on productivity in a workplace can be significant, employers may not recognize how relationships with co-workers can also be impacting performance. A recent Leger Marketing survey of Canadians living with depression found that most (67 per cent) respondents said their depression impacts their relationship with co-workers, with half avoiding contact altogether.

This avoidance with co-workers is not surprising given the survey also explored perceptions about depression and found that two-fifths of diagnosed Canadians believe depression is not perceived by the public as a medical condition (43 per cent) while less than five per cent of Canadians actually have that view.

"The general population's view about depression shows that we are clearly making progress in the understanding and management of the illness. However, we need to ensure that this knowledge and empathy toward those diagnosed with depression is translated into action," said Paula Allen, vice president of organizational solutions for Shepell.fgi.

Get on top of your work

► Guarantee resolution success by making smaller, more reasonable micro-ambitions.

► Battling the blues at work? You're not alone.

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

The new year is young – and so is the decade – but if you dive right into it, you may miss the best moment to rethink your daily drudgery and set a new year's resolution in place, one more meaningful than a weight-loss program.

The first month of the year finds work loads light as workers crawl back to their stations at a post-holiday pace, which is why career counsellors say it's best to set ambitious and intrinsically rewarding goals now – before the holiday vibe curdles like that last carton of eggnog.

"People should have ongoing goals they assess a minimum of once a year, but those goals shouldn't be just what you are going to achieve for the company, but where you want to be," says Jane Cranston, a career coach in New York.

When those old routines speed up, and the smart phones resume buzzing at a frequent pace, it can become easy to lose track of why you go through it all in the first place.

"You have to regularly ask yourself, 'How will future generations think about your contribution the world?'" Fearless Career Change author Marky Stein notes. "It's a big, final, existential question, but it's important for people to ponder."

If that seems a broad and daunting question, set meaningful micro-goals, Cranston recommends.

"Be fair to yourself," she stresses. "Goals should be smart – specific, measurable, attainable, realistic and timely. Break them into manageable pieces and tell another person about your goal."

"Better yet, work together to achieve them," she continues.

However expansive or small your 2011 ambitions, there's no better time to act on them than in this lull at the beginning of the year, Stein says.

"You can get your resumé in on a week where they'll only be receiving 10 resumés instead of 150," she explains. "In January, most companies have planned their new budget and have brand new budgets for brand new positions."

Cringe-free career talks

Feel like your child has no direction? Let Barbara Cooke, author of Parent's Guide to College and Careers: How to Help, Not Hover give you a few pointers.

Consider the difference between guidance and control.

Guidance is helping your child identify strengths and connect those strengths to opportunities in the economy. Control is dictating your child's career choice.

Guidance is helping them get firsthand information about opportunities.

Control is doing the research yourself.

Guidance is saying, "I want you to talk to two engineers before you reject an engineering major." Control is saying, "I won't pay for college unless you major in engineering."

Take the pressure off the process of career-planning. Help your child separate career info-gathering from career decision-making. All you are asking your child to do at this point is to gather information. You are not asking him or her to make a decision based on that information. Encourage your child to act as an objective journalist who is conducting research, interviewing people and observing work environments. NEWSCANADA

See you in CPR class

► The American Heart Association wants all U.S. secondary students to be trained in CPR ► Should Canada follow suit?

Learning CPR at school has given 14-year-old Olivia Frierson more confidence when she babysits or helps out at a church nursery.

"I'm not as worried if something would happen," said Olivia, a ninth-grader at Shaker Heights High School in suburban Cleveland.

The American Heart Association thinks there should be more students like Olivia. It wants states to require high school students to learn how to give CPR and use an automated external defibrillator before they graduate.

That would "create a generation that could be trained, ready and willing to act," said Mary Fran Hazinski, a professor at Vanderbilt University School of Nursing in Nashville, Tenn.

She's one of the authors of an advisory released Monday that the heart group developed with the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Emergency Physicians. It calls for state legislatures to require students to get CPR and AED training before graduating from high school.

At least 36 states either require or encourage cardiopulmonary resuscitation training in schools, according to the heart group. However, that ranges from suggesting that students recognize the steps of CPR to requiring certification.

Sudden cardiac arrest – when the heart suddenly stops beating – is a leading cause of death in the U.S. The heart association says an estimated 300,000 cardiac arrests occur outside the hospital each year.

Survival, which varies greatly from region to region, is estimated to be only about eight per cent on average.

"Bystander CPR can double or triple survival," said Hazinski.

By teaching students CPR and how to use a defibrillator, "They'd be available to respond at home, in public places like malls and health clubs," she said.

At Shaker Heights High School, students learn those skills during a four-week program that's part of a physical education class, said Stuart Gilbert, head of the school's health and PE department.

The students are at a "perfect age" for the classes, he said, because they're babysitting and getting other jobs that require such skills, like being a lifeguard," he said.

KEN CAMPBELL
THE HOCKEY NEWS

SENS' WOES DEEP-SEATED AND PLENTY

The Ottawa Senators could deal a few veterans and shed a little bit of salary before the NHL's trade deadline to be sure, but in reality that would be tantamount to putting a Disney Princess Band-Aid on a blunt trauma victim.

This particular patient needs radical surgery and the recovery process will be a long and difficult one. That is the reality facing the Senators as they decide what direction they will take as the Feb. 28 trade deadline approaches.

It would probably be a nice touch for them to trade defenceman Chris Phillips to a contending team after all he has given the Senators on and off the ice.

A few other deals might be made involving players whose contracts expire after this season. But let's not get silly here. Nobody will be touching Alexei Kovalev even if the Senators offered to pay them to do so.

They might be able to get a late-round pick for Jarkko Ruutu's expiring contract or Peter Regin, but both the real money and salary cap savings will be minimal.

But generally speaking, the Senators are trapped in what is becoming known in the NHL as salary cap hell. They have too many underachieving players on the types of big-money, long-term deals that have effectively made them untradeable.

There's no team in the NHL that would take Jason Spezza in a trade, not with a $7-million cap hit each of the next four seasons. Sergei Gonchar at $5.5 million for the next three seasons? Not likely. Milan Michalek at $4.3 million until 2013-14? Not on your life.

Captain Daniel Alfredsson should not — and will not — be going anywhere.

In many ways, the Senators are stuck with what they have and it's not as though they have a bevy of dynamic young talent on the way up to vault them back into respectability in the next season or so. Anyone who watched the recent world junior championship has come to the inescapable conclusion that goalie Robin Lehner and defenceman Jared Cowen are, in a best-case scenario, long-term NHL projects.

The sense around the hockey world is that neither GM Brian Murray nor coach Cory Clouston will be occupying their current job titles next season. Whether that tandem is replaced by Pierre McGuire and Ken Hitchcock or anyone else, whoever takes those jobs should insist on long-term deals because they have one enormous rebuilding job ahead of them.

► It's big in Europe. The question is, will Canadians get it?

► The 500 will be sold through Fiat dealers, most of which operate in conjunction with Chrysler stores. The dealers will be a gateway for other Fiat products entering this country.

Say hello to Fiat's fuel-saving funster

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA
WHEELBASE MEDIA

It's called the Cinquecento in Italy, but the Fiat 500 spells cheeky fuel-saving funster in any language.

Of all the many new arrivals from the revitalized Chrysler organization, the one car on everyone's mind is the Italian designed, built-in-Mexico Fiat.

The original 500 dates back to 1957 and was Fiat's way to get Italians off their Vespa motor scooters and into a more practical four-wheeled conveyance.

At the time, French, German and other European automakers were busy ramping up production of their own tiny cars, a pattern that the British would also follow with the advent of the Mini in 1959.

The Mini's successful 2003 relaunch under BMW's direction set the stage for a similar return for a brand new Fiat 500 that arrived in Europe for 2007 following a three decade absence.

It's now set to debut here as a 2012 model.

Any comparisons between the 500 to the Mini are inescapable, although the Fiat is a full 15 centimetres shorter and 5.6 centimetres narrower than its

2012 Fiat 500

What you should know about the 2012 Fiat 500:

- Type: Two-door, front-wheel-drive sub-compact hatchback.
- Engine (hp): 1.4-litre four-cylinder (101).
- Transmission: Five-speed manual; six-speed automatic (opt.).

► Market Position: While most other automakers have micro cars or new "city" cars, Chrysler only has the Dodge Caliber wagon. The new Fiat 500 temporarily fills this need while providing a gateway for other Fiat products down the road.

► Stats: L/100 km (city/hwy) 8.0/6.4 (MT, est.).

► Base price: $17,400 (including destination).

competitor and provides 16.5 centimetres less distance between the front and rear wheels. The 500 hatchback's diminutive size is slightly offset by a relatively tall roofline, but it still remains the smallest four-seater on the market.

Chrysler-Fiat refers to the 500 as having "city-friendly proportions," which translates into room for two adults in front plus a couple of very small children or pets occupying the folding rear seat. That should be of only passing concern for the hordes of 500 fans who will likely flock to the 58 newly branded Fiat dealerships in Canada for an early viewing and test-drive of this iconic small car.

Given the 500's relatively miniscule engine, its footprint is not likely to be that big, but Fiat is obviously banking on big success for its little gas sipper. If initial interest and upwardly creeping fuel prices continue, the 500 could wind up battling 1000.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You're a rebel by nature, and with Mars linked to disruptive Uranus today, you will be inclined to rock the boat even more than usual. Don't rock it so hard though that you risk falling out yourself.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 A Mars-Uranus aspect will endow you with all the energy you need to get things done. Before the day is over you will have accomplished something remarkable.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 A deal you made a long time ago will pay off today and you will be mightily pleased that you had the foresight to invest in something that others said was a dud. Was it just luck?

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Even if you are the kind of Cancer who likes to keep a low profile, today you will leave someone in no doubt of what you think about what he or she is up to.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 One way or the other you will make your presence felt today, especially on the work front where those who cannot keep up with your relentless pace will soon be left far behind.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 Today's cosmic activity will give you the confidence to step into the spotlight and let employers and other important people know what you are capable of. Don't worry about being over-ambitious.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Today, act only if it is absolutely necessary. For best results you should let others make the first move. It will work in your favour.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 You won't hesitate to call it as you see it today and, inevitably, some people will be shocked at how blunt you can be. But if that's what it takes to grab their attention, so be it.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 If someone suggests that the best way to show your love for him or her is to spend even more of your cash, it may be time to rethink your relationship. You may not care about money, but what about self-respect?

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Mars in your sign links to Uranus, planet of changes, so you'll go out of your way to do something a little bit different. Others may be surprised that you are suddenly so daring, but they better get used to it.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Is someone lying to you? Your Aquarius warning system is certainly on the alert and you would be wise not to ignore it. It may be no big deal, but can you afford to take the chance?

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Reach out to someone you have not been in touch with for a while. Pick up the phone and call him or her. Chances are he or she has been thinking of you. SALLY BROMPTON
